Study Committee Revises PEP Energy Policy

In response to our members concerns about cap and trade legislation and other issues, the PEP Board of Directors charged an Energy Study Committee to review and revise PEP's energy policy. The Study Committee met over 6 months, studying current legislation, research and energy policies of other business associations. After careful deliberation, the Committee crafted a new Energy Policy. See the Issues section of the PEP website for the full policy, www.pepmobile.org.

The policy states PEP's four primary goals are to:

- ❖ Promote conservation and efficient energy consumption;
- ❖ Increase the supply of energy in a manner that is safe, innovative and protective of the environment.;
- ❖ Improve the regulatory climate; and
- ❖ Provide proper Risk Management.

It also states that PEP supports a comprehensive educational effort to ensure citizens and businesses have the knowledge to

- ❖ Enter into the public debate concerning energy policy and regulation;
- ❖ Understand decisions and consequences for the coastal Alabama region; and
- ❖ Make informed individual choices concerning the use of all forms of energy.

Science, Industry, Community: Building Bridges to Coastal Health

Registration is open for the Alabama-Mississippi Bays and Bayous Symposium, to be held Dec. 1-2 at the Convention Center in Mobile, Ala. Hosted by the Mobile Bay National Estuary Program and Mississippi-Alabama Sea Grant Consortium, the symposium will include oral and poster presentations, keynote speakers and networking opportunities with the goal of bringing scientists together with local industry and community groups to better educate about the status of knowledge about the Northern Gulf coastal ecosystem and processes that alter it; what local industry is implementing to sustain coastal resources; and how citizens groups are participating in sustaining coastal resources. PEP executive director, Jennifer Denson, will be making a presentation about By-Product Synergy Central Gulf Coast on December 2nd.
